Description:

This class teaches the fundamentals of painting the head in oil. Students will paint the model from life in 6 sessions. Beginning with a toned canvas, students will execute a careful drawing and subsequently build up the structure of the head from darks to lights. Emphasis is on understanding the structure of the head and learning to mix colors to create realistic and harmonious flesh tones. The class will begin with a demonstration of the alla prima technique, used by John Singer Sargent and handed down through generations of atelier painters and teachers.

In this class we will have one model for all dates in the same pose. This is an opportunity to do a formal portrait in 6 sittings or to do two smaller paintings. Our model will be wearing a formal evening gown. The pose will be standing with model slightly turned. Think Sargent!

Please bring with you the materials on the attached MATERIALS LIST.

I'll begin with a demo of the ALLA PRIMA method we'll be working in. We'll spend the rest of the first session toning the canvas.

I'm looking forward to seeing you Saturdays!

Cheers,
Sarah
